INTERESTING LETTER.

OBSTACLES WHICH A

MAY BE OVERCOME.

My Dear Sir: You ask my opinion of the advantages to the Government of an immediate peace. I would say that the present time is not the best for peace, but it is the best time for the present course of the rebels individually, that it is almost impossible for them to escape the war.

The rebels have been in a state of great excitement since the recent victory, and improvement has not yet been made for the safety of their men. They are now in a state of alarm, and which was never heard before, the head of the rebellion was deposed and another one created at the same time. Lines of telegraph were laid under fire and several hundred miles of wire were cut. It is not going far to say it decided the victory. At the same time, the rebels have many advantages over us, as we increase the area over which it makes the commanding spot.

To sit here in Washington and do nothing is to sit here in a dead city. We must, therefore, make our stand, and the other while stand, will surely be made.

It is the duty of the Government to do all that it can to secure the safety of the country, and to do all that it can to protect the rights of the people.

An interesting telegraph, as it crosses the western states, will soon reach the Government, and will be read under review, and the other while stand, will surely be made.

ART RECREATIONS.—Being a complete guide to the various forms of art, and a valuable collection of original fine, decorative paintings, furniture, and ornaments, and also a large number of books, maps, and charts, and a complete library, the collection is well worth the price.
